Purolite announces price increase.

Petroleum based raw material prices continue to stay high

Bala Cynwyd, PA – November 29, 2011: Due to the current climate of continuing raw material and energy volatility, Purolite is increasing prices of its ion exchange resin and adsorbent products. “We are very appreciative of the impact that these increases may have on our customers, which is why we have focused our products on generating additional value to help our customers improve their bottom line in the face of these escalating costs” explained CEO Steve Brodie.

Purolite’s raw material surcharge which was announced on March 24, 2011 will be removed. Price increases will vary according to the application area.
